Do you run out money before you run out of month? Are your housing costs really your biggest problem? Is it that you simply don't make enough on the 9 to 5 to sustain? Did you know you earn within 20% of your closest friends? That being said, who are you spending your time with? Perhaps you have tried your hand at the wide world of investments, including stocks, mutual funds, stock brokers, friends and family businesses and have gained only mediocre results before reluctantly realizing that you've essentially lost your money and confidence in whatever it was you tooted to all the nonbelievers that you'd be filthy rich in no time flat. These are questions that we constantly ask ourselves in our quest for financial freedom and independence. For years, Anthony Von Mickle has been helping people get a better handle on their financial life.

Your group will enjoy his presence as he is creative with a comedic sense of style, Ivy League education and high powered circle of influence. As a youngster, he grew up financially deficient but never morally lacking for anything. He's used his lower economical scale upbringing to catapult him to levels he was never expected to make it to. In addition, he's studied a few things about money to know what he's talking about.
